

About Our Adult Survivorship Program

Our Adult Survivorship Program offers you clinical expertise, education, and support to help you manage issues that arise during and after your cancer treatment. Learn more about us at <https://adultsurvivorship.dana-farber.org>.

How We Can Help

We work with patients at many stages of cancer treatment, but we specialize in helping patients transition out of active treatment and live well beyond cancer. We focus on caring for, supporting, educating, and learning from adult patients in the years after their cancer treatment.

We work with you to learn what you need and then we create a list of recommendations that you can follow when you are no longer in active treatment. This personalized approach to helping you in survivorship includes:

- Giving you a treatment summary and survivorship care plan, with guidance and recommendations for future medical care coordination
- Making sure you have access to the right experts who can help you with your specific needs
- Recommending screenings and tests that can help you and your primary care doctor watch for recurrence and new cancer risks
- Tips for preventing and managing late- and long-term effects of cancer and its treatment
- Assistance with improving physical and mental health behaviors, including healthy living and smoking cessation

Services and Expertise for You

Navigating through cancer treatment and recovery can be difficult. Our program brings together medical and psychosocial experts to provide professional guidance and services for the wide range of issues that cancer patients may face during and after treatment, including:

Medical Concerns

- Cardiovascular disease
- Decreased physical activity
- Endocrine problems, including osteoporosis
- Fatigue
- Future cancer risk and screening
- Fertility counseling related to treatment(s)
- Kidney problems
- Quitting smoking / tobacco cessation

Emotional and Social Challenges

- Mental health concerns
- Sexual health problems
- Sleep disorders
